Essay.

Nowadays, some travel magazines say that many tourists fly to their holiday resort and almost never leave it. But tourists in the 1960s and '70s had enough local experience.

SP
EX First of all, majority of contemporary people are not interested in old and authentic culture. It's much funnier to go to a wonderland or a big local mall, because some people find sightseeing boring. Besides, today tourists have enough technologies to, for example, order a food indoor. Moreover, all of these entertainments can exist on a resort territory, so it's very convenient.

SP
SP On the other hand, tourists in the 1960s and '70s enjoyed every piece of place they were travelling. Mostly, they didn't have great parks or interesting shops on the resort territory, so they had to go outside the territory to not be bored.

Well, I think that it happens because today's resorts are well-developed and people just don't have to leave it. In addition, nowadays, can have more pleasure and rest staying inside resort. But 1960s tourists couldn't afford it.

In conclusion, I want to notice that it was very interesting to travel in 1960s, but anyway current tourism isn't that boring, it's just convenient, I guess.
